► Amirhossein Yousefi Keysari is the founder of KAAF Photo and one of the judges of the first stage, who said about the contest :

Thanks to all the photographers who have entered the contest.

The judging of the contest was done in a completely scientific and professional manner according to the fishbowl technique, but it should be noted that many good photos were sent to the contest, and I liked some of these photos, but in the end, the judging was based on the opinion of the crowd. The photos did not make it to the final stage, which is a common issue in the judging of photography contests. But by increasing the number of judges and the multi-stage judging by the photos, we tried to have a fair judgment, and this is one of our values.

▶ Jose Ruiz Gonzalez is one of the judges of the Creative photography section, who said about the photos and judging :

The work presented is oso good, all the images are great but to assess them I have prioritized those photographs that don't have too much production, those with a dialogue with the context and those that are more conceptual, in some cases approaches visual poetry. Although the least valued are good, their score is the result of less spontaneous images from a conceptual and formal point of view.

I hope I have been able to help you in your work and I wish you the best of luck with the effort you are making with your project. Bib love to you and yours. Kind regards

► Maryam Nematolahi is one of the judges of the social documentary section, who said about the photos and judging :

Documentary photography is placed between art and journalism, that is between creativity and reality. Documentary means a creative vision of reality and the right documentary is a thoughtful interpretation of real life. An interpretation that illuminates the facts and is a matter of interpretation, not objectivity or truth. But the goal of social documentary is to describe the real world and the people inside.

In some photos in the documentary section, journalistic vision (reporting a news incident) was dominant. The photos in this section contained more composition, form, geometry and classical aesthetics than a contemporary look, which is probably due to the selection and view of the first stage judges rather than the submitted photos.

In the way of scoring, I gave priority to photos that were intentional and the mentality of the photographer was visible in them, rather than simply describing social processes and its impact on people.
